

ABSTRACT

There is disclosed a modular dialing controller with an interchangeable subscriber service module which allows for the rapid conversion of the apparatus for use on different types of telco systems or in environments with varying incoming line configurations. Interoperability of the device in multiple environments is increased, which will increase the commercial utility of such devices. Also disclosed is a method of conversion of a modular dialing controller with different subscriber services by exchanging a subscriber service module. The subscriber service module itself is also shown.